DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
This building is three bays wide and three stories high. The first story is faced with rusticated stone block; the upper stories are laid in common bond. In the first story, six stone steps lead to a wooden door with leaded glass lights on the left of the facade. The door is placed in a vestibule, the entrance to which is a stilted, moulded round arch inscribed within a flat arch. The crown of the arch has a keystone. Above this is a blank frieze of stone which spans the width of the building. Windows are all double hung with one-over-one lights. First story windows have one piece transoms, and share a common mullion. A string course serves as the sill. The flat arch lintel is ashlar. The two second story windows are the largest in the building. These have moulded frames, and are topped by blank friezes with cornices. Sills of third story windows are moulded and superimposed on an ashlar belt course. The same frame-with-frieze-and-cornice motif appears here as in the second story, but here the cornice is superimposed on the moulding underscoring the foliated frieze above. Between the frieze mentioned above and the braced roof cornice is a dentil row.
